The question of endorsing cartificates interests teachers who live in one county and teach in another. The law is silent on the subject. It, however, fixes a penalty on county boards of education for granting grades not in accordance with this provision of law. The law provides for three regular county examinations each year on questions furnished by the State Superintendent. Papers written in accordance with this provision may be forwarded from one county to another and regarded by the county board of education. This is not endorsing a certificate directly. It is not endorsing the grading of one county board by another. It is accepting papers written in another county as a basis for granting a certificate. County Commissioners alone can not do this except in the case of special certificate. Regular certificates must be issued by authority of the county board.
